COMMUNITY SHOWCASE

2025 ART WALK

Pictured: Pieces from the Outdoor Resident Art exhibit displayed around Misericordia. The theme for 2025 is "In the Spotlight: What We Often Overlook." LOYOLA'S CIP 2025

Pictured: Students from the Loyola School of Social Work's Community Immersion Program (CIP) with Geana C (Admin) and Andrew A (Culture & Communications)

The Loyola School of Social Work's Community Immersion Program (CIP) is a unique way to introduce first-year MSW students to their graduate path, while also assisting local organizations. The beauty of the program is that students are assigned their site based on proximity; where they can be immersed in the types of social work within their own community. Misericordia opened its campus for a two-day immersion for them this month. With seven students and their Loyola liaison, Maria, they were first given a very heartfelt and informative tour of the campus by Geana C and Andrew A before volunteering in their assigned program areas. We would like to thank both the Art Department and Greco Gardens for your wholehearted participation last week! The students sang a lot of praise about Misericordia, and their positive perception of our community was greatly a result of their warm interactions with the residents and your team.

EMAIL SAFETY: 8 TIPS TO AVOID PHISHING SCAMS

Every day, more than 3 billion phishing emails are sent out worldwide. These emails are tactics used by scammers to trick you into giving up sensitive information about you or your company. Here are eight tips to avoid email phishing scams:

- 1. Verify the sender's email address. Scammers may pretend to be your bank, a colleague, or even a family member. Check any previous conversations with the sender or your address book to verify the email address.
- 2. Look for spelling errors. Various spelling or grammatical errors within an email can indicate fraudulent activity.
- 3. Never give out sensitive information. Most legitimate companies will avoid asking for personal information via email.
- 4. Be wary of urgent messages. People are more likely to give up sensitive information when pressured by a sense of urgency.
- 5. Call to verify requests. If you are skeptical of any requests made in an email, call the source directly to verify.
- 6. Avoid opening unsolicited attachments. Attachments can be embedded with malware—if opened, malware can steal sensitive information by gaining access to your computer or network.
- 7. Verify hyperlinks. Before opening a hyperlink, hover over the link text to verify the linked web address.
- 8. Contact IT or security teams. If unsure of an email's validity, report it to your IT department or security team to have them check for fraudulent activity.

COMMUNITY OF BELIEVERS

RESPONSIBILITY

from Linda B (mother of a Misericordia resident)

This is the fifth in a series of articles about the Misericordia Community of Believers and focuses on the core value: Responsibility.

The Community of Believers document summarizes this core value as follows: We value self-motivation and the energy it creates for teamwork and quality of care. As an organization, we are responsible to our residents, staff, families, supporters, the community, the nation, and our Catholic traditions.

As members of the Misericordia community, we know and feel the blessings that have been given to us, and we feel an awesome responsibility to show our thanks and to contribute to the mission of Misericordia. From a former orphanage to the beautiful campus that we see today, Misericordia has evolved thanks to the commitment and hard work of many people. Administrators, community leaders, staff, families, and residents have taken ownership and responsibility for growing and maintaining this wonderful place.

Residents ... The residents learn to take responsibility for themselves and to help each other. They look out for their friends, offering encouragement and providing practical help—such as tying a friend’s shoe. Within their homes, residents have chores and take pride in helping to keep their spaces tidy. Getting ready for work and working hard at their jobs is another expectation. And staff stress the importance of communication when something is wrong or someone needs help. As with every aspect of Misericordia, the abilities of each resident determine expectations and the level to which each person can take responsibility.

The recycling center, laundry, mail room, restaurant, and other locations provide gainful employment and also give residents the opportunity to make a positive contribution.

Residents also play a part in promoting and fundraising for Misericordia. During Candy Days, groups collect money at local businesses. For many events the Misericordia Heartzingers, Heartbreakers, and Show Time group provide the entertainment. These groups not only encourage the support of people in the community but are a witness to others of the abilities of our residents.

Staff ... The staff at Misericordia abide by the state and federal guidelines that apply to caring for people with disabilities, but the care that they provide goes above and beyond the minimum requirements. Staff are amazingly tuned in to the residents and quickly learn the habits, likes, and quirks of each individual. They are keenly aware of safety, ensuring that each resident is as independent as possible, yet taking into consideration any special needs. They anticipate situations where help is needed and provide that support without being asked.

Pictured: Misericordia staff and residents watering our flower boxes and taking nature walks to learn about our environment.

Staff treat residents with kindness and respect their privacy. They are available in times of distress to offer help, comfort, and practical advice.

Staff are also good stewards to the organization itself, observing sound financial practices by being aware of costs and saving resources wherever possible.

CAMPUS CONNECTIONS

COMMUNITY OF BELIEVERS (CONT'D)

Families ... Volunteering and fundraising are two primary ways that families contribute to the mission of Misericordia. Financial giving and participation in activities that generate donations are a practical means to ensure the future of an organization that is subject to cuts in government funding. Participation in major fundraisers, such as Candy Days, Artist in All, the MFA Benefit, and Family Fest furthers the growth of Misericordia. As part of Candy Days, families promote Misericordia, establish new patrons, and seek donations through their First Giving pages. And many families plan their own local fundraisers and open these to other families and friends.

A strong family commitment is the backbone of Misericordia. Parents and guardians maintain an active role in the lives of their family members. For most residents, regular home visits ensure that families share the responsibility of caring for their loved ones.

Organization ... Misericordia is committed to quality services and sound business practices. Leadership bears a huge responsibility as they have been entrusted with the care of our most precious family members. They also oversee the growth and development of Misericordia employees, answer to families, make important decisions about services, and oversee the care and maintenance of the facilities.

The organization is dedicated to recruiting and retaining good employees and offers a variety of incentives for this purpose.

The executive team communicates regularly with stakeholders, whether reporting on relevant legislation, announcing new services, or offering information about the campus and all that it has to offer.

In an effort to ensure continued quality services under any circumstances, Misericordia administrators pursue private funding as a primary source for growing the campus and the organization. While many similar organizations exist primarily on government funding, their services often ebb and flow depending on the political and economic circumstances. By encouraging strong fundraising practices, Misericordia has been able to continually upgrade its services, even during trying times. This thought is a great comfort to families and reinforces the idea that becoming a willing participant in taking responsibility for the organization is a shared venture.
